05 JUN 2018

Sir/Madam,

R&D in the field of AYUSH system in different areas such as drug development including quality assurance, pre-clinical safety evaluation and clinical research are being conducted at different levels such as Research council under AYUSH, Academic institutions (both AYUSH and non-AYUSH institutes such as Medical colleges, Universities etc.), other Research organization such as ICMR, CSIR etc. Further, research support is also being extended through grant under EMR vide Ministry of AYUSH, DST, DBT, ICMR etc. in the area of traditional medicine.

2. Lot of Research is being conducted at different levels as above in the field of AYUSH adopting different guidelines, methods and protocols and ending up research outcomes with low or poor translational value. Only few of them have led to clinical trial and marketing level. This may be attributed to lack of awareness regarding AYUSH strategies for R&D and provisions of Drug and Cosmetic act related to AYUSH.

3. In spite of availability of several guidelines such as GCP guidelines for ASU drugs, ICMR guidelines for bio-medical research for human participants, GCP guidelines published by CDSCO Ministry of Health and Family welfare, WHO guidelines for traditional medical research etc. there is no single comprehensive guideline to conduct research in AYUSH research. In view of this, it becomes imperative to develop directives on research practices for various components of AYUSH research sectors for uniform adoption across all stake holders such as Research councils, academic institutes, funding agencies engaged in AYUSH research.

4. CCRAS has developed three comprehensive and concise guidelines focusing on (i) drug development (Standardization & quality assurance), (ii) safety/toxicity and (iii) clinical evaluation for ready reference of stakeholders. These guidelines encompasses research practices generally to be adopted and followed by researchers in the field of AYUSH system such as research organizations, academic institutions and researchers seeking grant from EMR/IMR schemes of different funding agencies for research on AYUSH system, and would help researchers while designing and formulating the proposals and also planning academic/industrial research in the field of AYUSH systems.

5. You are requested to disseminate these guidelines among the faculty and PG scholars to enable them utilize their benefits for better planning for research. A set of complimentary copies of the abovementioned documents is enclosed with this letter for your institutional library. These guidelines have been made freely available on the website of CCRAS i.e. www.ccras.nic.in.

Yours Sincerely,

(N. Srikanth)
